Excerpt of pertinent information :

In a letter dated from Paris on 4 Jan 1949, Emil Ciurea writes to [ ] the following: . . . Let me begin with RADESCU's visit here. This time he adopted a new propaganda theme. On the one hand he showed to be a strong supporter of the political parties and on the other hand he complained to everybody about one single person who, being driven by his personal ambition and violence, tries to dominate the whole National Committee: CRETZIANU. The general used his lyric accents about the political parties especially the National Peasant members who arrived here recently from JUGOSLAVIA. 20

Generally speaking, however, his visit caused no sensation both because the Rumanians here are tired of the many unfulfilled promises which they have repeatedly been made and because this time the general could make no definite offer. The general continued his trip to ITALY, where he was accompanied by HERESCU. There he saw the King, but on his return home (to the United States) he had nothing to exploit from that audience. . .

Another reason for agitation here is the project for the Congress of Rumanians Abroad, which is being organized by VASILIU-CLUJ. He enjoys the confidence and friendship of RADESCU and at the same time has pro-green (pro-Legionary) manifestations. . . General Puin PETRESCU seems to have abandoned Col. TOMOROVEANU. He desires to develop a personal, independent activity, which he wished to place at RADESCU's disposal. . . To the above letter, there was attached a letter from Radu PLESSIA, which read in part: I fear that the old man(RADESCU) is going to head the greens (Legionaries). . .

This is all the pertinent information on subject in this document.
